

Phase I: Leading One's Self

Mastering Performance Management, Supervision & Leadership Skills

Mastering Performance Management, Supervision and Leadership Skills: Phase I – Leading One's Self is the first seminar of a four-part series.

This course is designed to improve public safety supervisors' understanding of today's leadership and management principles in the world in which they work. Participants will explore the elements of leadership, the differences between leadership and management and how to develop the skillsets to be successful in their own supervisory role.

Utilizing the Leadership Test © and the DiSC ® as teachable tools, participants will be guided through a process of identifying and enhancing their own critical leadership skills dealing with relationships and team productivity.

The success of any public safety agency depends on the quality and capacity of its leaders. This course focuses on just that...the quality and capacity of the leader...as a communicator, trainer, developer of people, quality control inspector, risk manager, and so much more. Participating in this session can greatly enhance the supervisor's ability to properly lead under any circumstances.

About the Instructor

Bill Westfall of The Gallagher-Westfall Group has spent the last 25 years building, teaching, and perfecting this 3.5-day, interactive seminar, incorporating decades worth of leadership and management work into a developmental program for law enforcement leaders.

He has proven to be one of the most acclaimed and requested law enforcement leadership instructors in the United States today. It has been said that Bill Westfall addresses the topic of law enforcement leadership like nobody else can, incorporating the lessons of history. Bill has the ability to see trends that will affect the future and is able to describe the evolution of society and the public safety profession, relating everything back to the fundamental values of leadership that assist organizations and people to reach their full potential.

Bill Westfall has provided liability, leadership and supervisory training to thousands of police officers in nearly every state in the United States, as well as, having been featured as a guest speaker on the Law Enforcement Television Network (LETN), the Fire Emergency Television Network (FETN) and the Federal Emergency Management Agencies (FEMA), National Fire Academy (NFA) at the National Emergency Training Center (NETC).

Earlier in his career, Mr. Westfall was Director of the Montana Law Enforcement Academy, as well as Director of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) Academy. Mr. Westfall received his BA in Criminology cum laude from Florida State University and has completed course work toward a graduate degree in Public Administration. He is also a graduate of the FBI National Academy where he was selected as class spokesman for the 141st Session.
